10+ HEALTHY Lunch Box Fillers

If you know you are travelling or in an office at lunchtime be prepared. Instead of the usual bag of crisps full of unhealthy omega 6 oils choose one of these or any combination.

They have been chosen to provide you with enough energy until dinner time and not give you a sugar rush followed shortly by a crash.

Many processed snacks are designed to be addictive, as well as full of minimal nutrients and many additives, so the body then wants more and more of them, altering the gut and reducing the capacity and desire for the high nutrient foods the body really needs.

1. Rice cakes - top with avocado, boiled egg & sliced tomato, cheese, cream cheese or nut butter
2. Greek yoghurt topped with berries and/or oats
3. Handful mixed nuts & seeds (or make it into a trail mix by adding some dried fruit like raisins, dates or apricots)
4. Apple slices with a tub of berries
5. Hummus & veggies sticks
6. Mini wrap filled with salad & a protein source (e.g. tuna, egg, chicken, hummus). Tip: Cutting into round slices about 1/2 inch thick makes them easier to pick up and less messy to eat
7. Ants on a log - peanut butter spread on celery with raisins in a line on top (kids love this one)
8. Fruit salad or fruit skewers
9. Homemade flapjacks, muffins or oatcakes
10. Toast with cream cheese or nut butter and fruit slices whatever you choose add in some veggie bites and use rye crackers or oatcakes rather than bread or wheat crackers (which is fast sugar).

'SALAD BOXES

I bet when you saw "salad" in the title here you thought, "Oh, no." Because a salad for lunch just doesn't sound like enough to fill you up, right?

But there are salads and salads. The kind you were probably picturing was a side salad – a light mixture of greens, the odd tomato and a few slices of cucumber. these suggestions like the 10 on the previous page are designed for flavour and keeping hunger at bay until early evening.
They are also a great way to get your healthy fruit and veggies portions per day. Just copy at the picture and add your favourite combinations including things like twice-cooked rice leftovers with added chicken, salmon or cashew nuts and seasoning. You. can also use your own salad dressing, salad glaze or a little mayonnaise.

SOUPS

Homemade soups are another great way to add in veggies. It is really easy. to whip up some soup from any leftovers and add to a soup thermos.

Make sure you don't have soup and a chunk of bread - that would send you heading for a crash unless the soup is made with lots of things like lentils and has meat or other high protein.
take some oatcake biscuits or some rye crackers and veggie bites to eat with the soup and you will have a very healthy filling lunch - especially in cold weather.

The soup below is homemade tomato and topped with a handful of grated cheese when it's hot. Served with homemade oatcakes.
